① Evidence-Based Treatment Planning for Social Anxiety

Evidence-based practice (EBP), widely accepted as the standard of mental health treatment, is not as commonplace among mental healthcare providers as you would think. Many providers surprisingly do not integrate recent clinical research into their everyday practices. This course is designed for mental health providers interested in empirically informing their treatments. You will not only learn about the process of empirically informing your treatment plans for social anxiety disorder (SAD), but you also will gain extensive knowledge about some of the most commonly identified ESTs for SAD, along with some considerations for relapse prevention.

② Family Psychoeducation: Advanced Evidence-Based Practices

These days, serious mental illnesses are widely accepted in the medical field as illnesses with well-established symptoms and treatment. Despite this recognition, one of the most common roadblocks to successful treatment outcomes and to recovery is a lack of family support, as well as the lack of understanding within the family of the nature of the person's mental illness. Based on content from Substance Abuse and Mental Health Service Administration (SAMHSA), this course is part of the Evidence-Based Practices series designed to teach you the principles and practices that research suggests are most effective in the implementation of a family psychoeducation program. In addition, this training covers how to best develop an effective family psychoeducation program and provides helpful tips for mental health authorities. Whether you are a mental health provider or an agency administrator, this course is an opportunity to develop new skills to support consumers, as well as to develop an effective program of this type in your own community.

③ Introduction to Treating Gambling Problems

Gambling has become more socially acceptable and widely available in the United States. As a result, substance use counselors, mental health professionals, primary care physicians, and social service workers are steadily confronted with individuals who are in need of problem gambling treatment services. Gambling problems are an important public health concern because they are associated with serious physical, social, psychological, financial, and legal problems.
