Solution-Focused Therapy
Research evidence supports that brief therapy models, such as solution-focused therapy (SFT), are efficacious and are more easily integrated into many primary health care settings than lengthy psychotherapy models. The main goal of this course is to give you the tools you need to accurately identify and treat clients who are appropriate for solution-focused therapy. You will learn the basic tenets of solution-focused therapy, its process and approach, the primary techniques, and its utility in treating individuals and families with a variety of psychosocial problems. Experiential lessons, research-based information, and de-

Evidence-Based Treatment Planning for Social Anxiety
Is this course you will not only learn about the process of empirically informing your treatment plans for social anxiety disorder (SAD), but you also will gain extensive knowledge about some of the most commonly identified ESTs for SAD, along with some considerations for relapse prevention. To apply your learning, example vignettes of selected interventions are provided.

Personal Outcome Measures for Children, Youth, and Families with Young Children
This course will assist you in understanding and applying the Personal Outcome Measures® approach to youth and families of young children. The lessons, stories, and interactive activities in this training cover the basic concepts and applications of Personal Outcome Measures®. This training is useful to anyone working with youth and/or families with mental health issues, developmental, intellectual or other kinds of disabilities, family issues, or other needs that require extra support.
